PURE PAINT

Nine years is a pretty long time for a coat of paint to last and look well.

A man in this city came into our store last week and said: "I want to paint my house with Masury's paint and nothing else. I painted it nine years ago and it just needs another coat. I notice my neighbors have all painted their houses at least twice in that time and some of them three times, except those who use Masury's paint. I have never seen any paint to wear like Masury's, and nothing could induce me to use any other kind."

We hear conversations similar to this every once in while. If you want the wearing paint get Masury's.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

—FOR—

COLTS, CATTLE, SHEEP, HOGS, ETC.

It has been the aim of the Highland Live Stock Show Association from the outset to encourage stock raisers to breed UP in all classes of stock and boost the fact by exhibiting the same annually at the stock show.

To carry these ideas of the association into effect and get it on firm financial basis, it was necessary—with a limited means—to work on conservative lines to meet the heavy expense, and as fast as these obligations can be paid off the associations will be more generous in prizes and in extending privileges to county exhibitors. What the show and exhibitor need is co-operation.

Every one should feel an interest and see the advantage of a stock show in the county. More strangers learn of us by it. It makes more buyers and puts us in the progressive class.

This year, colts, cattle, sheep, hogs, etc. will be entered free of charge. Send to the secretary a list of stock and number of classes you wish entered so they can be recorded. Don't put it off. All the classes can be seen on first page of Recorder.

Farm For Sale

Having decided to go back to the Valley of Virginia, I offer for sale, privately, my farm of 500 acres lying on the Cowpasture River and about three miles north of the Staunton & Parkersburg pike. About 125 acres of this land is fenced with rail and plank. This is natural grass land and is especially suited for grazing, being well watered by river and never failing springs. The remaining acres are in timber and is a good outlet for sheep and cattle.

On this place is an old but comfortable six room house, water in yard, a small barn and all necessary outbuildings comparatively new. Plenty fruit for family use, also some small fruit. This property is in an excellent community, and is close to church and school, mail right by house. If this land is not sold privately before I will on the 10th day of Oct. offer it at public auction on the premises. For further particulars call or write

The Filigree Bracelet

An Oriental Tale

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

On the third evening after the tour-ist steamer Neptune left Constantinople the little group of people whom congenial interests had drawn together out of the hundreds of passengers aboard the big ship gathered their seven chairs in friendly proximity.

Professor Trayle laid his hand on the soft white wrist of his daughter, Madeline. "I notice that my daughter is wearing her filigree bracelet this evening, and it reminds me that there is a story connected with its purchase in Constantinople."

"Good!" cried Mr. Hanford, and his wife echoed approval in her quiet voice. "We have had the story of 'A Carpet From Mazandaran' and also the alluring tale of 'The Crystal Ball' and what Miss Gray saw in it. Let us have the bracelet story, and mind you omit no details, Miss Trayle."

"It's really the plainest sort of story," protested Miss Trayle. "I had planned, when my turn came, to relate the wonderful adventure father had with the bronze teapot."

"Ah, my dear, that is my very own story," laughed the professor. "I see that Mr. Felton has unraveled the carpet of Mazandaran, on which no man can sit and tell other than the truth, so remember that the old legend applies to both sexes."

They all laughed as Alexander Felton spread the ancient bit of carpet which he had found in a remote interior province and Madeline Trayle with a single graceful movement sank to a seat upon its silken texture.

"Father and I spent a day among the bazaars in Constantinople," she began, "but we could not discover anything that resembled the bracelet I wanted. A dear friend of mine in New York possessed a filigree bracelet which was considered a perfect specimen of Byzantine silver work. I may as well save words by saying now that this bracelet is its duplicate in every detail. My friend said the bracelet had been purchased in the bazaar in Constantinople, and I supposed it would be an easy matter to duplicate it. The day father and I spent there revealed that there was not another bracelet like Emily Drake's in all Constantinople unless it was worn by some fair denizen of the city. Thus spoke the shopkeepers in the bazaar."

"Father has a friend who is interested in the raisin industry, and this gentleman has a villa on a vine clad slope beyond the tip of the Golden Horn, and it literally overhangs the Bosphorus sea. We drove out there and spent a day, and on our return to Constantinople we met an itinerant peddler, who offered me this bracelet."

"Of course we did not bargain long for it. It did not need his clever tale of its having once belonged to the sultan's favorite, who tired of the bauble and gave it to a slave woman, who in turn sold it to our peddler. He asked a ridiculous price, and father paid it without a murmur."

"We had not proceeded more than a hundred yards before the peddler was at our horse's heels, begging for another word with my father. Of course father had spoken to the man in his own language, and now he understood the babel of sounds that poured from his lips. As the sounds were accompanied by an outstretched palm I knew the man wanted money for something, and I saw father toss the peddler a twenty plaster piece and listen with interest to a long recital, accompanied by much gesticulation. Yes, indeed, father, you did appear much interested in the story the man told."

"When we were once more on our way toward the city father related the story the man had told to him for 20 piasters. It was a good story, well worth 30 piasters, father, dear. I do believe you secured a bargain in that story!" Madeline smiled mischievously up into her father's rueful countenance.

"Remember, you're sitting on the carpet of truth, my dear," he warned laughingly.

"It was a good story," protested Madeline.

"Ah, do tell it!" cried Mrs. Hanford impatiently.

"Please do," chimed in the others.

"The story went that the sultan bought it from a fortune teller, who predicted that whatever woman wore it on her arm might marry the richest man in the world. One can well imagine the supercilious incredulity of the sultan and the disdain with which he waved the story teller aside. Well, never mind whether father and I believed the story or not. The bracelet seemed to possess an added attraction for both of us, and I will confess that as soon as we reached the Neptune that afternoon I hastened to my stateroom and scrubbed it vigorously with soap and water until it became quite clean and bright."

"It's incredible how filthy some of that native jewelry is," remarked Miss Gray, with a shudder of disgust.

"Apparently they believe that a certain amount of soil laid on the article increases its interest and naturally its value," laughed her nephew, Arthur Clayton. "I'll confess to one fact of mine when I'm traveling around these parts and—"

Buy it now, Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over. Buy it now and be prepared for such an emergency. For sale by all dealers.

"Yankee! These parts!" scoffed his aunt.

"That's what I am!" maintained Mr. Clayton emphatically. "I'm the most dyed in the wool Yankee that ever—"

"Manufactured a wooden nutmeg," finished Mr. Hanford quietly.

"Go on with the story, Miss Trayle," urged Miss Gray impatiently. "We've interrupted you times enough. Arthur, keep still!"

"Well, I scrubbed the bracelet clean outside and inside and wore it the next day when I went ashore. We had been spending the morning in the Sultan's mosque and were standing on the steps waiting for our carriage to convey us to the hotel for luncheon when father suddenly saw Mr. Jussem, the raisin exporter, and dashed down the steps to intercept him, leaving me alone."

"Then from the shadow of the tall columns beside which I was standing there emerged the tall, lean form of a man clad in spotless white, with a fez on the back of his dark head. He was a man of middle age, I should think, and his hair was iron gray, and there was the saddest expression in his black eyes."

"Without speaking a word he stretched out one lean brown finger and touched the bracelet on my wrist. At the same time he raised his eyebrows inquiringly. 'Well, I must confess there were so much dignity and command in his manner that I found myself taking refuge in French and explaining volubly how I came by the bracelet.'

"He listened closely and when I had finished held out his hand with another commanding gesture, but still he did not utter a word." Madeline paused, and taking the bracelet from her father's hand, slipped it over her own round wrist.

Alexander Felton was watching her with a lover's delight in her beauty and charm. They had just become engaged, these two, and the mystic carpet that Felton had brought out of the wilds had witnessed their betrothal. The others in the little party had been quietly informed of the delightful secret by Madeline's father, and as the beautiful girl had become a favorite among them ever since the big ship had sailed from New York six weeks before they rejoiced in her happiness and that of the man who had wooed her faithfully.

Madeline exchanged a swift glance with her lover, and then her eyes dropped to the filigree bracelet shimmering on her arm.

"What did you do, Miss Trayle? Did you give him the bracelet?" asked Mrs. Hanford.

"Yes, of course I did. Who could have resisted the commanding gesture of his hand and the authority in his eyes? I didn't dare do anything else. I simply removed the bracelet and gave it to him."

"He snatched it eagerly, pressed it to his lips and then examined the delicate work, nodding his head affirmatively as he seemed to recognize every tracery of leaf and blossom and twig. Then he looked within the bracelet, and all the light seemed to die out of his countenance. Before that it looked glowing, as if a candle had been lighted inside, if you know what I mean. He suddenly looked old and worn and very contemptuous as he dropped the bracelet back in my hand. Then only did he speak, and, to my surprise, he spoke in English."

"It is the wrong one, madam," he said. "I crave a thousand pardons."

"You have lost one like it? I asked him."

"My daughter wore it the day she disappeared. I have never seen her since," he muttered, and, with a deep bow, he disappeared just as father came back."

"We talked it over that evening, and I told father how closely the man had examined the filigree bracelet and appeared to recognize that it was not the one he sought. So father produced his magnifying glass, and we, too, searched the inside of the bracelet. Hidden away on an obscure wry twig were tiny letters, enlightening us as to the reason for his contempt for my bauble."

"It read 'Made in Germany,' and pout went all the pretty story of the sultan's favorite."

"The sultan's favorite may have been the daughter of your dark eyed stranger," remarked Miss Gray thoughtfully.

"And your friend's bracelet might be the genuine article," added Arthur Clayton as they all arose and prepared to go below.

"I shall write to Emily Drake anyway and tell her to look inside her bracelet for any indications that hers is the genuine filigree bracelet," declared Madeline, accepting Alexander Felton's hand to assist her from her seat on the carpet.

One by one the others bade good night and strolled away until at last there remained only Madeline and her father and Alexander Felton. Professor Trayle got up to go, passing, leaned over and kissed his daughter's cheek.

"In spite of the fact that your bracelet was 'made in Germany,' my dear," he said quietly, "the peddler's legend holds good, for in marrying Alex, here, you are marrying the richest man in the world."

Madeline was startled. "Why, father, what do you mean?" she asked.

"Alex will tell you," said the professor, and he slipped away and left them alone.

"You will tell me?" she pleaded as his arm closed about her. "What did father mean?"

"He meant that because you are marrying me I am the richest man in the world," said Alexander Felton tenderly. And so the tradition of the filigree bracelet was fulfilled after all.

Dysentery is always serious and often a dangerous disease, but it can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has cured it even when malignant and epidemic. For sale by all dealers.
